The Last House is a drug and alcohol treatment center community comprised of three homes in the West Los Angeles area. Our mission is to provide a safe, structured and fun environment. The Last House is a place where residents can find purpose, progress, build self-worth and gain a support system that will last a lifetime.
The Last House drug and alcohol treatment centers are aftercare facilities for various needs of recovery. However, we provide much more than just a place to lay your head. We provide realistic structure for those who have a desire to implement real change in their lives. Whether residents are court ordered, come by way of intervention or arrive on their own accord, all of our clients receive the opportunity to gain the necessary tools they need to reshape their lives and work toward a successful future. If one is willing, we are confident in our ability to help that individual build a life worth living, free of substances and filled with purpose.

Camaraderie is a key component of the house. At The Last House, our residents are surrounded by the constant and consistent support of peers, staff and Last House alumni, a brotherhood forged over months and years of shared sobriety, hard work and helping hands. When newcomers arrive, they are assigned a big brother. Each member of the house is responsible for keeping the other members accountable for their words and actions. Time and experience has illustrated that peer to peer feedback is more effective than feedback from staff or management. Community and a sense of kinship are common among our residents, something The Last House takes great pride in.

Alcoholism and addiction do not exist in a vacuum. The Last House understands that each resident may require different key elements to complement the care they receive at the house. Therefore, we work hand in hand with the appropriately fitting outside providers of each individual to ensure that their needs are met.
How does The Last House invoke change? By building trust, developing integrity and learning accountability. We understand the discomfort clients experience as they begin to live their lives free from substances. By implementing social engagements, such as sober parties, service commitments, conventions, fellowship and mandatory house outings, we give our clients the opportunity to face many common challenges with the constant support of their peers. They no longer need to feel isolated or alone, the very factors that can drive one back to their addiction. If you arrive with an open mind and trust the process, The Last House will be your last drug and alcohol treatment center experience.
